

Amy Carnevale has served as Massachusetts Republican Party Chair since being elected in January 2023. Her service as Party Chair has been marked by a focus on candidate support, resulting in a State Senate special election win, messaging on the issues important to Massachusetts residents such as affordability and failed immigration policies, and professionalizing the party operations.

Amy was born and raised in the Bay State and attended college at George Washington University, where she graduated with a B.A. in Political Science with Honors. She worked part-time in both the White House Office of Presidential Personnel and the Office of Political Affairs while still a student. Amy then went on to work in the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy.

Following the historic 1994 election, which gave Republicans control of the U.S. House for the first time in 40 years, Amy worked on Capitol Hill for former Rep. George Nethercutt (R-WA), the Congressman who had defeated a sitting Speaker of the U.S. House. Working on issues including healthcare and natural resources, Amy worked her way up to serve as the Congressman's Chief of Staff at the age of 28. In this position, she managed four offices, a staff of about 18 and an annual budget of over $1 million.

After 10 years on Capitol Hill, Amy translated her political and policy skills to work for a law firm where she continues to serve as a federal government relations consultant. Amy was elected to the firm's PAC Steering Committee in 2022 which manages contributions of about $500,000 per election cycle in careful compliance with campaign finance regulations.

Amy serves as a Board Member of the New England Council as well as a Board Member of the Governor's Commission on Intellectual Disability. She is a member and was a previous Chair of the Marblehead Republican Town Committee. She is also a member of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee, where she has served since 2012. Amy resides on the North Shore with her husband Tom and their three children, Cameron (2009), Tyler (2011) and Eliza (2015).
